NEW WORKS FROM JOLBY & ASHLEY FORRETTE

February 25, 2010 - March 20, 2010

at Together Gallery 2916 NE Alberta St. Suite A Portland, Oregon

Opening Reception with the Artists: Thursday February 25, 6-11pm

Ashley Forrette (Portland photographer) and Jolby (Portland artists) will bravely explore the mythology, legends, and superstitions of the sea with their collaborative works to be featured at Together Gallery beginning February 25, 2010. They will be creatively interpreting legendary maritime tales and showcasing the odd traditions and beliefs held by sailors and explorers of the 1800's. The show will also feature work by Dolls for Friends, Shoko Saito, and an original sound track written, composed, and recorded by the indie rock band The Graduate. Jolby will be counting down the days to the show on their blog by releasing sneak peaks of the new work each week: blog.jolbyandfriends.com

About Jolby: After meeting in design school at the Art Institutes, Josh Kenyon and Colby Nichols began their design careers in their hometown of San Diego. In 2005, they started working together on various projects and since have been labeled "the illustrative monster that is 'Jolby.'" However, as their lives and careers progressed they found themselves in two very separate cities: Josh in Chicago and Colby in Portland. Though it would seem the distance would end their creative alliance, the two found new ways to co-produce, proving they may possibly share the same brain. Jolby combines their talents through Colby's artistic obsession with creatures and shapes and Josh's creative love for pattern and texture. They both currently live and work in Portland, Oregon. Ashley Forrette's entrance into the world of photography was inspired by her desire to capture indescribable moments and the simplicity of beautiful places. Her imagination and natural eye for composition have always been fostered by the creative company she keeps. She has also been inspired by countless forms of art, including culture, theatre, music and design. Ashley currently operates her own full time photography business in Portland, Oregon. Her work can be viewed at www.ashleyforrette.com
